Thank you. Mr Chairman, as I have indicated on previous occasions, Sweden fully aligns itself with the statement made earlier this morning by the European Union on behalf of all its Member States.

Mr Chairman, I do not have any further detailed comments to your revised paper in addition to those I shared yesterday. We will be using the coming weeks to further study your very comprehensive document in all its details.

Instead, I wanted to react to a theme that we heard in yesterday’s first round of discussion on the paper, and to some extent today. We heard several delegations express the view that it is time to leave the all inclusive approach that your paper represents, to start “trimming the sails” as one delegation put it. And other delegations have maintained very strongly that your document cannot be used as the basis for the negotiations planned in 2012.

Mr Chairman, we actually fully agree with that last sentiment. We see your paper rather as a very useful list of issues that will have to be tackled one way or the other at the Negotiating Conference. We are glad to have had the possibility to explore, in a structured way thanks to your texts, all the issues that different parties have considered important for the ATT process - whether or not these views are explicitly reflected in the text. The process has helped us prepare our own views on the substance of this important topic. We will continue to use your document and its structure as a sort of “road map” for the upcoming negotiations rather than as a prospective negotiating text, and we hope that others will do the same. And since we will have one more meeting in PrepCom format, we look forward to your continued efforts to refine the text in order to reflect our continued discussions.

Finally, Mr Chairman, I hope that you will continue to guide our collective efforts in the same way as you have done so far, and would like to congratulate you for the remarkable way in which the dialogue in this room has developed over the course of three short PrepComs.

Thank you.
